Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Mission Statement

We, the people of St. Bavo Parish are committed to be the living presence of Christ in the world today.

Empowered by the Spirit, we strive to live our shared commitment through liturgical celebrations, prayer, education, spiritual growth, bearing witness to faith and service to all.

We have now reached Week 4 of our reflections on Synod themes. Our topic this week is Vocations, defined as “Responding to God’s Loving Invitation.” We need to be careful not to define “vocation” too narrowly, as responding only to a call to priesthood or religious life. By definition, a vocation is a call from God to serve in any particular way.

It’s the particularity of a vocation that distinguishes it from the general call to holiness and service that every Christian receives through baptism. A vocation is God’s loving invitation for us to seek holiness and fulfillment by doing something or being someone for others. Some vocations are manifested in one’s state of life, such as priesthood, consecrated life, marriage, or a chaste single life. Others are manifested in one’s career, such as a teacher, a doctor or nurse, a social worker, a first responder, or a writer or artist. Still others are manifested in voluntary work, such as lay ministry in the Church or a volunteer position in another institution that serves the public. Hence, we can fulfill multiple vocations at the same time, and our vocations also can change as we move through different stages of life.

This week, we are asked to think about vocations and vocation promotion broadly. As an example, when we consider what our parish is doing in the area of vocations, we include things like how the parish celebrates weddings and anniversaries, not just how we pray for more priests and religious. The personal reflection questions also touch on many different aspects of vocation, beginning with the most basic of all discernment questions: “What is my purpose?” Below is a partial list of the many personal reflection questions in the booklet. As you can see, there are many facets to consider and many opportunities to discern more deeply how God may be calling us and those around us to serve him. How can we respond more joyfully and wholeheartedly to God’s loving invitation to us? And, how can we support and encourage others to respond more joyfully and wholeheartedly to God’s loving invitation to them?

What is my purpose? How much is God a part of my consideration of my purpose?

Have I considered how I am making my life a gift for others?

How am I living my vocation (discipleship, state-of-life) in the world?

How do I best live out my vocation so that it is a witness to others? Is it joyful?

Who are the models I look up to in particular vocations: Which priests? Religious? Married couples? Consecrated or chaste singles?

How am I encouraging others to respond to their vocation?

Do I find myself reluctant to pursue, explore, or encourage others to consider vocations to priesthood or religious life?

Where does that come from, what are the roots of my hesitation?

How do I see/notice/observe the beauty in the complementarity of vocations present in the Church around us? How do vocations support, fortify, and witness to one another?

Fr. Pete
